Description
Let's take a project in which you have more than one layer in edit mode Select one Enable the in-place editing mode and open an alg Do other things before you run the alg Go take a coffee and when you are back to your computer, it'd be nice if something can help you remind the layer to which the dialog is attached: the layer name in the title would help for that (even maybe with number of selected features - somehow like the attribute table).
