When setting "default output vector layer extension" to GPKG, some tools are still writing shapefiles. An example is "split vector layer". I think, most of the tools never haven been ported to support multi-layer vector sets.