Description
For the past months, the yellow warning message "There is a new QDIS version available. Visit...." has almost always been visible on the startup page even so I am using the latest installation package available for mac OS. This is due to the fact that the latest installation package for mac does not match the current version of QGIS. For most users, I think it would be more usefull to be informed when a new installation package is available for a specific OS. People who have the skills to compile QGIS from source most likely don't need a message to inform them that a new version is available.
