

QGIS Application - Bug report #4035

Print Composer shape combo box not reflecting current shape

Description
Draw a new shape. The new shape is an ellipse and shows on the Item tab Shape combo box as Ellipse... as expected. Click on the combo and select Rectangle - the shape changes to a rectangle but the combo still says Ellipse. Select rectangle from the combo again and the combo then shows Rectangle. It seems that the combo saves the current shape name rather than the new picked name.

I can't seem to replicate this. Which version are you running.

I can reproduce it in 1.7.1 on Ubuntu. The signal `currentIndexChanged` is connected to 2 slots. I tried to remove connection to `setGuiElementValues`. Instead, I added another connection between item and widget (similar to other composer items), although I'm not sure if it is necessary. See the patch.

- Pull Request or Patch supplied set to Yes

Some can review and eventually commit this patch? thanks.

Agreed, it's good to connect `itemChanged()` signal, because the widget stays in sync when using undo/redo functions. In future it will be good to emit more `itemChanged()` signals in the composer items. Like that, the widget stays in sync also if an item change comes from a python plugin.

- Resolution set to fixed

- Status changed from Resolved to Closed

Seems fixed in commit:4b86c710e9
