Description
As you can see in the attached screenshot, QGIS keeps pinging my web-services. There are a lot of problems here: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- QGIS can't even support WFS > 1.0.0, so I have no idea what its doing re-pinging them.- I have no project open. I went "new project" and discarded the previous one. So why has this been remembered?- The requests shouldn't be timing out in the first place - the service is still running. Typing the address into a browser URL shows it is working fine.- The service isn't receiving these requests. Restarting QGIS resolves these.
Using NextGIS built against master on Windows 7, 32bit.

Further testing - QGIS starts one of these ping cycles whenever a bad request has been made through it. So when I enter:

http://wppgeog3:8082/geoserver/wfs?SERVICE=WFS&version=1.3.0

and QGIS gives me the error message (per #7098), it then triggers this pinging. All of the ones in the screenshot brought up one or another error.

Which version is that?

I don't think this is a WFS specific issue (why I didn't set that) - one of those requests is WCS.

The version I'm using is: <http://gis-lab.info/programs/qgis/NextGIS-QGIS-5ed164a-29.01.2013.exe> - The about page for it doesn't state what version of Master its built against.
