Description

If I do File > Save as Image, the default is BMP, an archaic media type that generally should only be used when modern alternatives don't work.

Could PNG be the default instead? For a general purpose raster image intended for non-GIS software (e.g., image editing, documents, printing, etc.), PNG seems like the best option. PNG is an open standard and, except where compression is needed, is generally the standard general purpose raster image type for modern applications.

Saving map defaults to PNG instead of BMP

This only affects a user the first time they save a map as an image.
Afterwards their preference is saved.

+1 this bothered me since years. Not a big deal - only annoying. BMP is really the worst choice.

Hi Filipe from what did you conclude that .PNG is now the default?

From a fresh rebuild from now, in
Menu -> Project -> Save as Image is still defaulting to .bmp with me

Did you fix this yourself? Are we looking at the same things?

Reopening for now

#5 - 2014-02-14 08:22 AM - Etienne Tourigny

output format is saved in the lastSaveAsImageFilter user pref so default value has no effect once you select another one. But the default is still BW.

Yes, I always use .PNG so Etienne's right. Sorry for closing the ticket.
